High school mandate set

by Janice Harrington
Review Editor

Didsbury High School is prepared to enter a new year of education after a committee drafted a core purpose statement designed to give the school some direction.

The committee set out to draft the statement earlier this year after Alberta Education instituted a school-based decision making policy which would have seen parent advisory committees making budget decisions for the school.

DHS Principal Ian Taylor said the school's teachers, administration and current advisory council felt if the PAC were to handle the responsibility, they needed to determine a mandate from which to base their decisions.

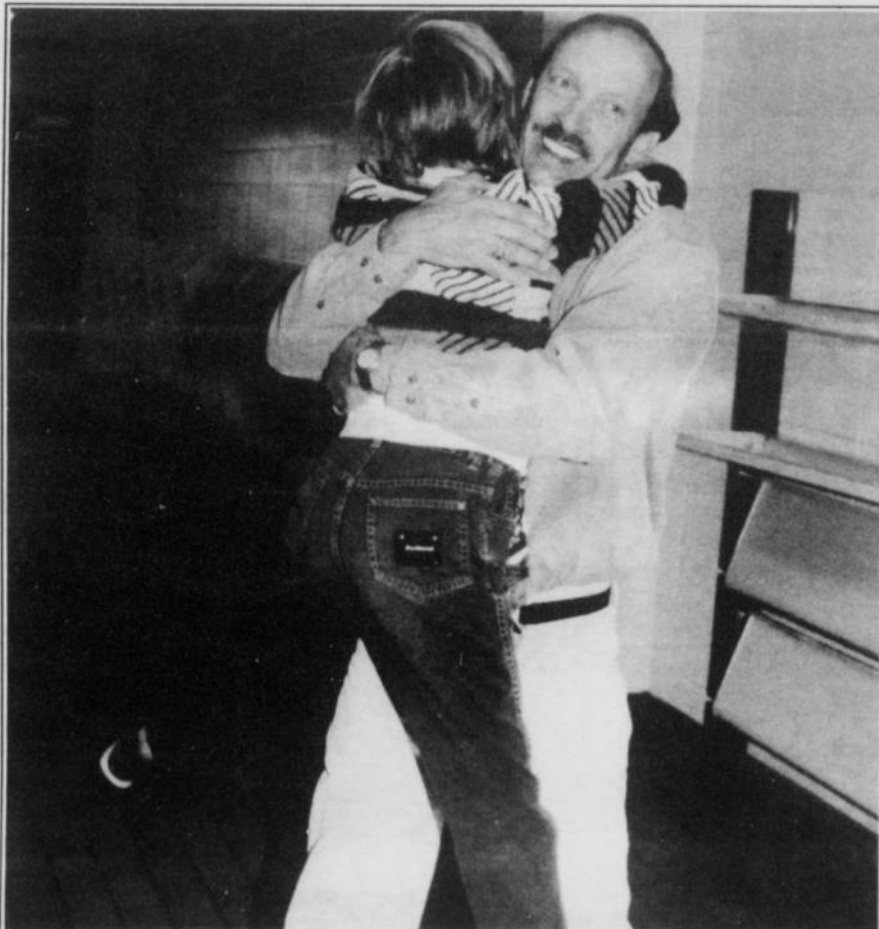

Taylor said a committee was struck, led by teacher Tom Craven, to create the mandate. Others on the committee were parents Marjorie Malinowski, Inez Kosiniki, Roxanna Martindale, Calvin Aussenhus and Bill Windsor, students Sheldon McKee, Tammy Shields, Rick Kohut and Raina Peterman, community members Joanne Braun (from the Chamber of Commerce), Reverend John Lucas (from the ministerial association) and Town Councillor Gayle Veno. Teachers on the committee, besides Tom Craven were Brian Banfield, Denise Miller, Cat Turner, Todd Klein and Steve Thompson.

After five meetings, the committee drafted their core purpose statement.

Taylor said the statement will be used by administration and the PAC to focus their efforts for the upcoming year. While Alberta Education has revised their policy returning the parent council to an advisory role, school administration will still be responsible for

Two former members to vie for school board

by Janice Harrington
Review Editor

Two members of the appointed regional school board will allow their names to stand for another term.

Susan Denischuk of Carstairs and Joe Henze of Sundre announced they would seek another term with Chinook's Edge Regional School Division after working for nearly a year with the newly amalgamated board.

The two other members from the former County of Mountain View Board, Dave Derksen and John Grimstead, have decided instead to run for county council in Mountain View in this October's election.

The four were appointed to the amalgamated board last year. Along with five members of the former County of Red Deer School Board, the four have worked to set up the new regional system.

Skydivers launch lawsuit

by Janice Harrington
Review Editor

The feud between the Olds/Didsbury airport commission and the Canadian Skydive Centre has taken on a new dimension this month after a law suit was launched by the skydiving group.

Verle-Ann Fewchuk of the Canadian Skydive Centre said they have served papers to airport owners - the towns of Olds and Didsbury - and the airport commission alleging loss of business and discrimination over the airport commission's refusal to allow the skydivers to take off and land at the Olds/Didsbury Airport.

The feud erupted last year when the Canadian Skydive Centre, run by owner Randy Fewchuk, made arrangements with a local farmer for a landing site east of the airport. The airport commission refused to allow the skydivers' plane to take off and land on the public strip, alleging safety problems.

Fewchuk, who continues to run skydive classes in Didsbury, appealed to the towns to intercede. After the purchase of the airport from the province earlier this year, the towns set up a mediation process which later fell apart when the mediator could not get the two sides to meet on any compromise.

Didsbury Mayor Ray Lea said he could not comment on

by Cst. W.T. Houk
Didsbury detachment

The Didsbury RCMP would like to remind anyone who operates a bicycle within the Town of Didsbury, a bicycle is a vehicle and the rider should abide by all the laws regulated under the Highway Traffic Act. This being the case, each bicycle should be registered. Registrations can be obtained at the Town Office. By operating an unlicensed bicycle, the rider is subject to a $5 fine under the Town Bylaw.

If bicycles are considered a road vehicle they should be driven on the road, not sidewalks. Sidewalks are for pedestrians and for pedestrians safety, bicycles are to stay off the sidewalks. Again the rider would be subject to a $5 fine by the Town Bylaw.

So remember, when riding your bike, you are just another vehicle and motor vehicles must treat you as such. Stay on the roadways and ride safely.

Correction

Calculations used to determine factors in Emerson Shantz's public opinion column last week contained an error.

In the example, the factor of .9543 should have read .9524. The answer would be correct assuming 4.9 percent real interest.

Based on a 5 percent difference between interest rates and inflation, the calculation for a tenant would be:

2/3 crop share - 1 year - 3.173 percent - 2 years - 6.19 percent.

Cash - 1 year - 4.760 percent - 2 years - 9.302 percent

A wake up call

A Provincial Court judge decided a 20-year-old man needed a sentence which would wake him up after he pleaded guilty to several criminal charges, including four break and enter charges stemming out of Olds.

Michael Douglas Woods was charged with five separate break, enter and theft incidents in Olds including those at Olds Leisure Products and the Olds Agricultural Society office. He had pleaded not guilty to those charges but changed his plea after he was again charged for breach of his recognizance order which allowed him out of jail on the earlier charges. The breach of recognizance charge stemmed from August 12 when Woods smashed the window of a vehicle in Olds and stole compact discs worth $500.

After reviewing Woods' record, the judge told Woods he needed to decide how he wanted to spend the rest of his life.

"It looks like you've spent the better part of five years going from one break and enter and bad situation to another," she said. "You can hardly be called a neophyte to the court system. It is time for a sentence that will wake you up. Now it is time for you to decide if you want to do life in prison on the instalment plan or if you want to turn your life around."

Woods was sentenced to nine months for the break and enter charges, 14 days for the breach of recognizance and 30 days for the theft of the CDs. In total Woods will spend 10 and one half months in jail. He was also ordered to pay restitution of $450 to the Olds Agricultural Society and $500 to the owner of the CDs.

Concern for family safety

A teenager who shot his brother in the back of the head with a bee-bee gun was handed 18 months probation and was recommended to live away from his family while he sorted out some psychological problems the court feels he is having.

The 15-year-old boy had been playing with his brother and other friends near the river at Sundre last January when he shot his brother in the chest several times with the gun. The boy's jacket absorbed most of the impact. But the situation escalated when the older boy told his brother to run and then shot him in the back of the head. The pellet had to be surgically removed.

A pre-sentencing report ordered by the court expressed concern that the boy might continue his aggressive behavior until he became a danger to society. It also recommended he not continue to live with his family until he could control his rage.

"It makes not sense to return you to your (home), the judge told the boy. "You could impose a danger to your family. You have to get to the bottom of what on earth is fuelling this antagonism and deal with it in a constructive way or I am worried, and so is the Crown, that you will be back here on more serious charges."

Besides the 18 months probation, the boy, who cannot be named under the Young Offenders Act, was prohibited from owning weapons for the same period. He is expected to be placed in foster care under the Child Welfare system.

Parent abuse

A 16-year-old who pleaded guilty to assaulting his elderly parents was sentenced to three months in jail and one year's probation in Didsbury Provincial Court last week.

The boy, who cannot be named, was sentenced after his record showed he committed the assault while still on probation for two other assaults on his father from earlier this year.

The boy, who said he had problems with alcohol and only vaguely remembered the incident was charged on July 30 after his mother ran to a neighbor for help. The boy was also charged with uttering death threats to his father.

The judge told the boy he was too dangerous to return to his family and sentenced him to three months. As part of his probation, he will also be able to attend alcohol abuse counselling.

Spree leads to jail

One of a group of youths charged after a break and enter spree in Sundre was sentenced to four months open custody last week after pleading in guilty in Didsbury Provincial Court.

The 15-year-old was charged after a break, enter and theft at the Lazy J Saloon in Sundre. Thousands of dollars of band equipment, liquor and cigarettes were taken from the saloon. He was also charged with

Taking off the gloves

Janice Harrington

The candidates are announcing their candidacy and the public can soon expect the gloves to come off in what will likely be one of the most vocal election campaigns this area has seen in a while.

This October's municipal election will be an interesting challenge for candidates who are stepping into a pile of emotional issues and tense economic times thanks to the sweeping changes instituted by the provincial government over the last year.

In the race for the school board, candidates can expect some wrenching debate over the regionalized board's move to equal level funding for all grades and over what is perceived is a moral majority of the north ward in the regionalized group. Issues, disciplines and rules have changed dramatically under the new regionalized board, comprised of a majority of representatives from the former County of Red Deer school board.

South ward rules, like corporal punishment by teachers, have lost out to the north ward majority. Some candidates may find support for a platform urging return to the regimented discipline. Others may find support for their concern about a top heavy administration in the board.

On the municipal side, candidates will be interested in a different set of issues. At the town, they will run into the problem of increasingly smaller transfer payments out of the province. Greater responsibility is being thrust on towns and much less money is being sent along with it. On top of that concern are the sweeping changes which have occurred in town administration over the past year. Town operations are not the same as they were in the last election. Some may decide that is good, while other may run against it.

At the county level, candidates may well be asked just what exactly they will be doing over the next three years, assuming the county system lasts that long. There are strong rumors that the province may decide to eliminate this level of government and expand town limits instead, regionalizing services within a greater area. In any case, without the school board under the auspices of the county, councillors will be much less busy than in the past.

With all of these changes and the issues facing voters in the coming election, this is certainly the time for voters to exercise their democratic responsibility and familiarize themselves with the candidates and the issues. The next three years are likely to be as unstable as the last and it would be unwise not to find the candidates you feel will best serve your interests.

The voting process will be slightly more sticky this year as well but feel confident the Review will try to supply you will all the information you'll need.

The public opinion

by Doug Robertson
Carstairs

I read with interest Emerson Shantz's letter in the August 22, 1995 Review under Public Opinion. It had to do with the paying of the Crow/WGTA to the farm landlord rather than to the actual productive steward of the land, the renter. Having had Mr. Shantz for a math teacher in my youth, I would not presume to debate his calculations as to present values of land, money, etc. What I will point out, however, is that any calculations like these are based on a faulty assumption - that a landlord deserves all the Crow/WGTA payout because its termination decreases his/her land values.

Is there a case to be made that somewhere in the prairies land values may be affected? Certainly, but for this to happen requires one or all of the following factors:

1. The landlord's farm is far away from the marketplace. If you live in the northern Peace River or any far northern part of the prairies and depend on rail alone, it may influence your land prices there. In the Edmonton to Lethbridge corridor there is no reason to use this as an excuse.

2. The farmer has never phoned a trucker or independent grain buyer. Depending on the elevator companies alone for your price information can be deceiving - shop around, after all, isn't it your grain? A "Super B" can haul 44 mt at a whack and its very hard to turn a grain auger on and off, right?

3. The farm grows only CWB grains: Growing only Board wheat and barley for income these days isn't done any more, even in Pool-friendly Saskatchewan. But if you must do it, expect to see the increased freight show up marginally in your land values.

4. Perhaps the most critical - if the payment were a significant amount: If producers were receiving $100/acre/year and those payments ended suddenly, the effect on land values would probably be measurable. What we are talking about here is something like a one time payout of less than many canola herbicides. $25/acre is fine, but sway land values? Forget it.

There is no need any more to point fingers at certain elevator companies who cost us a chance to settle this subsidy problem years ago at much higher than $25/acre payout level. There is also no need to point out that our precious WGTA benefit paid for a nice eastern livestock industry and cause a total lack of value-added industry here in the west. The fact that the federal government has chosen to take away the Crow/WGTA but is stalling on allowing the system to become more efficient so that farmers who are now paying the whole freight bill get value for their money (the oft-mentioned "Transportation Efficiencies"), is the real concern. My advice to producers is to demand that the feds show some guts for once and change this now.

My advice to landlords is this. Put away the calculator and use your head and heart to decide what's fair. Do you like your present renter and do you want them to continue to take care of you land? If so, please remember they now pay much more than $25/acre to be in business next year, without much hope of any offsetting efficiency savings for, it looks like, years to come. The $25 payout helps them to pay the freight on grain shipped and, in turn, pays your rent next year. Good renters, like good neighbors, are worth keeping.

Reflections of quiet places sought

Dear Editor:

With this letter, we want to introduce a project that we hope may be of interest to your readers. We are compiling material for a coffee-table style of book to be entitled "Quiet Places, Quiet Thoughts". It will include poems, brief story experiences or songs - the fruit of reflective thought or inspiration or motivation while in one's own special "quiet place".

When you have a chance to gain a quiet moment in your busy life, do you reflect on family or friends in far away places, remember times of sadness or humor, or recall days gone by with nostalgia? Do you reflect on the events of today and the meaning they may have for you or do you sometimes reflect on ancestral stories and find fresh contemporary meaning? And have you recorded some of your thoughts and feel that what you have recorded may be of interest to others?

Story has it that Isaac Newton twigged to the theory of gravity when he was struck on the head by an apple while he was relaxing under an apple tree. Have you surprised yourself with moments of inspiration or insight?

You may not have discovered gravity or Granny Smith apples but your story, anecdote, song or poem would carry some significance that might be humorous, nostalgic, sad, heartwarming, insightful, forlorn, spiritual or mythical: the result of quiet, reflective thought in a quiet place.

We want to learn more about "quiet places". So, along with any materials that are submitted, please include a description of the place that you enjoy the most for "quiet thought". To augment each story or poem that is chosen for publication, photographs or artwork may be commissioned to provide ambience and affiliation.

We hope that you have an item of interest that you may wish to send to us. We are looking for original works by individuals who may never have had the opportunity to be published before. It is acceptable if you choose to remain anonymous or to submit your story under a pen-name. If you know of someone else who has a story to tell, please make this invitational letter available to them. We welcome all submissions.

We hope for a wide variety of artistic submissions from Canadians across this great nation, suitably illustrating our rich diversity and invite your early response by the fall of 1995.

Please address your submissions or enquiries to: Q.P.Q.T., Box 456, Linden, Alberta TOM 1J0 or Fax it to (403) 443-5032.

Sincerely yours,
Les Fetterly,
Project Leader

Adjusting to Didsbury's 'open spaces'

by Elaine Wilson
Review writer

Purchasing an older home that needs a bit of work is a challenge many have taken on, but the Thomas family, who purchased the old Lutheran Church building east of the high school, have a unique perspective on the process.

When the sale closed in June of 1995, Wendy and Trevor Thomas noticed trepidation from their four children who range in age from 9 to 15; Charley, Stephanie, Stacey and Carley.

A marked transformation has taken place regarding the kids' attachment to their new home. Initially, Wendy said, they didn't want anyone to know they were moving into a church, but as renovations progressed, it was pronounced "the coolest house anywhere". One reason for the turn-around may have something to do with the fact that they have approached the substantial project as a family, with the kids involved in almost every aspect of the project from simply running errands to painting the entire basement area.

The bright orange arched double entrance doors discharge a welcoming message, Wendy said, relating that a regular course of curious passersby often simply walked inside to check out what happening there.

"Until we put the door knocker on the door, we had people walking in at all hours of the day and the evening. It was okay, though, we weren't in a state of privacy back then, it was a construction site at that particular point," Wendy said, smiling. "I think it didn't hit them that they weren't standing in a church until they came through the main doors. All of a sudden they realized it wasn't a church, it was someone's private home. I think I felt worse for them, though, than they did for me."

Oftate, the 'construction site' phase is transforming into a homey atmosphere.

"Our furniture arrived on Sunday," Wendy said.

"But we've been working on it since June 9," Trevor said.

Trevor, who is a maintenance engineer with Canadian Airlines, and Wendy, who is an artist with affiliations to prominent art-related organizations, have done the lion's share of renovations themselves. The exterior was completed when the property was purchased, but the family is into the final stages of a complete renovation of the interior. The former cathedral will retain the wide open feel through an resourceful addition of loft areas at either end. In the west loft, a roomy master bedroom with a walk-in closet and an en-suite bath has been fashioned, while in the east, an artist's studio, to eventually feature skylights, is taking shape. Two suites, located at either end of the building are already rented out.

The draw to Didsbury revolved around the purchase of the former church, but other considerations came into play as well.

"We knew nothing about the town at all," Wendy said, explaining that they came from a neighborhood in Calgary which was basically a ten block radius surrounded by busy thoroughfares, necessitating continual chauffeuring duties. City folk themselves, Wendy and Trevor said the city was not the same in 1995 as when they'd been growing up there. They welcome the small town atmosphere offered by Didsbury.

"[In Calgary] I don't think our children walked to the store by themselves until they were nine-years-old," Wendy said, adding that city kids rarely rode their bikes anywhere, whereas in Didsbury their children enjoyed a new and novel independent mobility.

Cost was also a consideration.

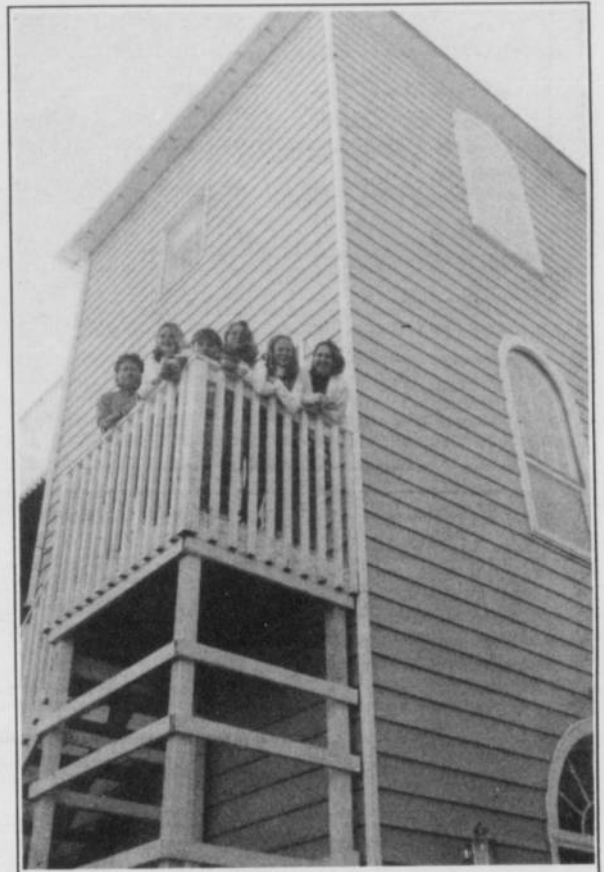

"We could never have afforded this much square footage in Calgary," Wendy said.

As it turns out, filling their portion of the 4800 square feet with furniture and accessories will not be a problem. Even though they moved from a large bungalow in Calgary, they are quickly turning the large open area into a cozy living space. The 'kids area' is the former church basement and will feature four good sized bedrooms and a rumpus room area and will retain the original boys and girls' Sunday school bathrooms.

Incorporating the inherent atmosphere, the Thomas' have made use of stained glass windows and pews in the dining area into the general decorating scheme.

Coming from Calgary, the Thomas' knew friends were not far away, but like any new kids in school, there is always a concern about making new friends. Any worries they might have had obviously evaporated by the end of the first school day, as the house filled up with a throng of children who accompanied their new school chums home after the last bell for the day rang in school.

project of a turn of the century home in B.C. gave the Thomas' plenty of experience and a wealth of ideas to utilize in their current venture and while renovations will be an ongoing process, the Thomas' anticipate completion of the living area by the end of September.

"It's frustrating," Wendy said, "Because you want it done right away."

But as the construction phase winds down, the family looks forward to getting to know the people in the area.

4-H show a success

Special to the Review

Will Harvie, eight, won the Champion Pee Wee Groomer and Reserve Champion Showman at the Canadian National Junior Hereford Show at Abbotsford, B.C. July 18-22. Over 100 juniors from across Canada participated in this four day show.

Scott Harvie won Reserve Champion Intermediate Showman. Cole Harvie, Scott Harvie and Doug Durie won first for marketing team, a provincial group effort where they have to sell their heifer to the panel of judges. The team must know the cow's pedigree, breeding records, EPD's and present the information in an organized fashion. One member shows the animal and the other two speak.

Alberta also won the Challenge Cup for the third year in a row. Cole Harvie was on the panel. A similar format to Reach For The Top. The panel must answer agriculture based questions in a timed manner.

The juniors have art, lecture, photography, skits, public speaking and live judging competitions also during the show. Sara Latimer of Olds placed first with her yearling heifer. Richard Latimer also had a first with his cow and calf. Alberta had over 30 juniors entered at the show. The youngest competitor was 4-years-old.

At the Kitchen Table

by Noreen Olson

The Virginia Creeper is beginning to turn magenta and maroon and the branches of the Crab Apple trees droop under the weight of their fruit. A few late roses are among the big, bright, red rose hips on the old Hansa and a few hopeful buds are still coming on the new yellow Hansa and the Cuthbert Grant. The Pink Grutendorst still has lovely clusters of tiny, pale pink, fringed, but scentless roses and one branch sports lovely dark red ones. Must have come from below the graft.

We have found the right place for dahlias. The new raised bed against the old stone foundation generated enough heat to bring dahlias into bloom even in this wet and sun starved summer. The colors are so lush and bold and luxurious that I want to keep them forever and hold back the frost through force of will or maybe with some magic incantation. I will try to preserve the bulbs of course but I have never had any luck doing this. I either get a mushy mess in mid-November or some desiccated shreds in May.

The blue delphinium is gorgeous this year and for once I got it tied up before the wind damaged it. We bought a new pink delphinium this summer and I can hardly wait to see it bloom next year. Mom Olson had both blue and purple monkshood but in one of my garden re-organizations I lost the purple one. I think it was the year that I let some wild raspberries grow and they swallowed a flowerbed overnight. Two summers ago I discovered a brave little stalk of purple monkshood blooming out of sod by the roadway and this spring my son Mark dug it out and brought it in. It's blooming and, in a couple of years, it will be a fine big clump. The nasturtiums, despite their hail damaged leaves, are cheerful and sunny and have completely filled their various pots. There are rows and heaps of tumbled petunias, waves of wind tossed poppies, cushions of alyssum. The wild cucumber vine is 14 feet tall and still growing, the scarlet runner beans are an eight foot mass of bloom.

The vegetable garden is awash in pinks and reds and purples. Lavatera, Cosmos, Poppies, Stock. A row of sunflowers have bowed their heavy heads. When my nephew Lee was little he called them "tractor flowers," because of their size and because of the lovely green, yellow and black John Deere colors. There are marigolds out there that are lemon scented and send up a cloud of fragrance when they are shaken and there are African Daisies and Calendulas and Candytuft and Gladiolas and more vegetables than we will ever eat and birds and butterflies and sunshine and trees and clean fresh air and open space. My part of the world is about as lovely as any place on this earth.

So why am I feeling so depressed? Partly it's "the end of summer blues" but mostly it's because the school bus went by this morning and somewhere in Calgary a baby whose name I don't even know is being raised in a car.

The baby's mother called a CBC phone-in show this week. Guest on the show was a man who is starting a union for welfare recipients. Maybe such a union is necessary, I don't pretend to know much about the subject, but I suppose welfare recipients need all the support they can get. I do know that the man was angry and rude and nasty to anyone who did not wholeheartedly agree with everything he said. When a lady phoned to offer her support he recognized her voice, called her by name and volunteered the information that she lived in a car, had been on welfare for several years and had two children the youngest of whom was five-months-old. The announcer wondered why someone on welfare and with no place to live would bring a child into the world and to this the guest and the mother replied angrily and loudly that it was her "right" to have children if she chose to do so.

This little kid is going to grow up and go to school with other little kids who have been in gymnastics and violin since two, played computer games since eight-months, learned to swim before they could walk, know libraries and museums intimately and have been exposed to educational toys and classical music since the day they were born. Someday the school bus will pick up both these kids and what kind of chance has the car kid got? He might as well be from another planet.

Do women have the "right" to have children that they can't provide for? Does the baby's father have the "right" to dump the fruit of his loins on the welfare system and into a car? Do I have the "right" to all this space and beauty while innocent babies hang their jolly jumpers from a rearview mirror? Do we taxpayers have the "right" to tell this woman that she can't keep her kids under these conditions?

I had better go play in my garden. I am getting so depressed.

Special to the Review

Sympathy of the area is extended to the Levagood and Bartz families as Delbert Levagood passed away August 26th at the age of 78 years in the Didsbury Health Care Center. Funeral was held at the Redeemer Lutheran Church on August 29th with interment in the Didsbury Cemetery and lunch served at the church by the church ladies.

Delbert was born Nov. 8, 1916 in Didsbury and was the eldest of four children - Vera, Marian and Glen to Ira and Sylvia Levagood. He received his education at Clovermount, Waterloo and Didsbury schools. He married Ella Bartz in 1943 and raised four children - 2 sons, Ron and wife Irene of Calgary, Richard and wife Dianne of Didsbury, 2 daughters - Jean and husband Steve Kiel of Seymour, Indiana and Lorna and husband Harry Reese of Didsbury.

He spent most of his life farming west of Didsbury and his great loves were his church, family, friends, including his coffee buddies at Steve's Restaurant. He will be sadly missed.

Birthday Club was held at the home of Susie Neufeld on Wednesday, August 30th. All enjoyed visiting and a lovely lunch.

Fred Newsome is again driving the west school bus.

New families are the Lorne Sainas who are building up a lovely new house and farm buildings just southwest of town - east of Merle and Bev Dippels. Family of two girls going on the school bus - Katrina in Grade 5 and Danielle in Grade 3. We welcome them to the area and hope they will soon get acquainted with the area residents.

The Walkers, who are living on the Bankowski farm across from the Sheehan farm are welcomed to the area. They have two children starting on the school bus: Joanne - Grade 11 and Ryan - Grade 7. Hope everyone will soon get acquainted. Another child on the school bus is Louise Meyers' granddaughter, Carlene Lynn in Grade 1.

Please Note: There will be the annual community breakfast to be held at Leonard and Anne Neufeld's on the morning of Sept. 16th from 8:30 to 10:30 hosted by the Len Neufelds, Ed Vermonts, Mel Dicks and Jay Millers. All area residents are welcome to attend.

Farmers have been having a tough time getting the hay baled. Weather has improved, dare I say it and along with the haying, swath of grain has commenced.

Rudy Durieux
new Grade 5 teacher at Westglen

The approach Rudy Durieux has found works best is a policy of mutual "respect and courtesy". While he didn't encounter anything out of the ordinary on his first day, it was a busy one, involving the normal albeit hectic routine of assigning lockers, sorting through paperwork and getting to know his students. He is most looking forward to working in a larger classroom enrollment (27) than the 8 to 15 students he taught in his previous posting as Principal of Midway School. "I'm looking forward to applying my skills in order to reach every student."

Dana Daines
new at DHS

Other than time constrictions forcing a speedy paper administration process in front of her first home room class on August 30, Dana Daines first day on the job went pretty much according to plan. Her teaching style involves "treating the students as adults," she said. "If they're acting up, [I'd say] 'What are you doing? You're in grade nine now.'" It was also the first day in a new school for her grade nine home room class who were far more nervous than their instructor. "Their energy level was higher than I thought it would be," Daines is looking forward to coaching girls volleyball and plans to explore the degree of interest in starting up a rodeo club.

As a Resource Room instructor, Max MacNeil plans to put his previous eight years as a reading specialist for the county to good use saying, "I plan to practice what I preached." He hopes to "instill a love of learning", through "helping kids to become

"[Westglen] has a good atmosphere for learning."

Darrell Hutchinson Back in class at Ross Ford

Every few years, Ross Ford instructor Darrell Hutchinson arranges to take time off to travel and gather material for a book now in the final stages of editing. Originally from Montreal, he's travelled to places like Costa Rico and Venezuela, allowing him to pursue his favorite avocation. "My main hobby is bird watching, a 'birder' as it's known," Hutchinson said. In over a decade of teaching, Hutchinson has taught grades one to four; this year he's in charge of Grade 2B at Ross Ford. "Kids are kids," he said, responding to a question about how he perceived the attitude of students in 1995. "Some are cynical, some are enthusiastic. It seems like they grow up a lot quicker now. It happened gradually, but the kids are about two years accelerated. What I did in Grade 4, these kids are doing in Grade 2." He said he found it "reassuring" that today's students took an active interest in ecology, he said, "This is the generation that's going to change things." Another new face at Ross Ford this fall is that of Catherine Klein Hofmeyer, who will be teaching grade 3.

Phil Corning
new Westglen Principal

The primary difference Principal Phil Corning perceives between his previous posting at Hugh Sutherland school in Carstairs and his new position as Westglen Principal is "focus", relating to switching from grades K through 12 to Westglen's middle school classes ranging from 5 to 8. "A student 'crisis' at Hugh Sutherland could range anywhere from missing rubber boots in Kindergarten to a missing scholarship application, but here, things are more consistent," he said. Planning an open door policy, Corning said his "door was always open"; he welcomes dialogue and exchange with those affected by and interested in the school's progress and policies.

Pierre Martel Janitor

Students at DHS will notice a new face in the custodial department, even though he's spent a busy summer preparing DHS for a new throng of students. Custodial engineer Pierre Martel enjoyed a relatively quiet first school day on the job last Wednesday. "Everything is pretty much ready," Martel said. "I only had to pack one desk to a class. There are a few things to do, but I hope everything continues to go as well as it has today."

Plan needed for WGTA end

Special to the Review

Alberta farmers have more to consider than simply filling out the Western Grain Transitional Payments Program forms by the September 15 deadline say two Alberta Agriculture farm business management specialists.

"While in the immediate future many farmers and landowners will be dealing with the forms and payment arrangements between landlord and tenants, the expected impact from eliminating the Western Grain Transportation Act (WGTA) will be far more reaching than the one-time exgratia payment," said Paul Gervais.

"How the Prairie farm economy will change hasn't been seen yet. However, it's certain Alberta farmers will have new challenges and opportunities that will affect farmers' business plans significantly. Our advice is to assess the potential impact on their operation right away," said Ted Ford.

The first significant consequence of no WGTA is changes to the cost of shipping grain through the railway system. The expected result is farmers will place greater emphasis on cost reduction in the short term.

However, in the longer term, increased freight costs will have to be factored into crop budgets, said Ford. "Farmers will have to decide the most profitable crops to grow and in what rotations. From this will flow decisions about how much they can afford to pay for land, either to rent or to buy."

Risk and uncertainty also have to be factored into these decisions. As well, farmers may want to seek out information about new market opportunities for their crops. On and off-farm diversification and value-added activities are other options.

"The starting point for assessing changes is taking stock of your current operations and then asking yourself a number of questions," said Gervais. These questions include: How will freight rate changes affect my operation? What other changes are happening that affect my operation? Are there new market opportunities for me? What business planning tools are available to help me assess those opportunities? What information don't I have? Who has this information?

Alberta farmers can get help from a number of different department specialists located around the province. This includes the farm business management branch in Olds, farm management specialists located in eight district offices, market specialists in seven district offices and market analysts at department headquarters in Edmonton. For more information, contact your local district office.

September 15 deadline for WGTPP

Special to the Review

Alberta farmers and landowners face a September 15 deadline to complete claims for the Western Grain Transitional Payments Program (WGTPP).

WGTPP is a federal government program set up to distribute a one-time $1.6 billion payment to eligible farmland holders. The payment is compensation for the elimination of the Western Grain Transportation Act (WGTA) subsidy to railways.

Eligibility for the program payment is determined by what crop was grown on the land in 1994. If the land was summerfallowed in 1994, then the 1993 crop is the criterion. "The forms and your claim are relatively straight forward except if you rent or lease land," said Paul Gervais of Alberta Agriculture's farm business management branch in Olds.

A condition of the program payment when eligible farmland is rented or leased is that landowners come to an "equitable" agreement with their tenants over the payment.

"This has been the cause of some controversy," said Gervais. "However, it's important to note the payment is in anticipation of reduced land values. Also, payment will only be made to the landowner and in most cases will be tax deferred."

The tax deferral is because Revenue Canada will treat the payments as capital receipts. These can be used to reduce the cost-base of the recipient's farmland.

The payment can be shared with a tenant as a rent reduction, rent rebate or even a gift to the tenant. "This will depend on the circumstances and advice of your accountant," he said.

If landlords and tenants can't decide on an equitable arrangement, a mediation/arbitration process is available through the program's administration. For more information, call the WGTPP administration in Regina at 1-800-667-9962.

"Tenants must inform WGTPP in writing by October 15 to start the process if they're unhappy with the arrangement with their landlord," he said.

Main Street Beat

What good are old buildings? Changing social and economic realities have made many commercial buildings in our town centers redundant. From the 1950s on old buildings were often demolished and replaced with parking lots or new construction. But as familiar streetscapes disappear, we have begun to take a closer look at what is done with old buildings and the value they represent.

Old buildings represent major investments that are expensive to replace. The exterior of a building may look worn out or deteriorated but its basic structure is often sound. Regular maintenance and replacement of important elements of the building (roofs and eaves troughs for instance) extends the entire structure's life. Although not always the case, building preservation can make sense for purely economic reasons.

Old buildings have stood the test of time. Many old buildings were well built - even overbuilt (by today's standards) - in an era when labor and craftsmanship were relatively inexpensive. Often materials were used (such as large dimension timbers) that are difficult, if not impossible, to obtain today. These well-built structures have proven their integrity and may well outlast newer structures.

Older buildings offer prime locations. Central location and a strong community presence are important assets for old buildings. The character and architecture of an old building location are potentially important elements of a business. A viable and appropriate use can make the preservation of an old building profitable. Old buildings represent opportunities for new uses. Heritage preservation is sometimes misunderstood as the practice of changing on to old buildings for reasons of nostalgia or architectural fancy. Perhaps the costs associated with demolition and construction are perceived as posing too great a burden and an old building is simply abandoned or turned over to a preservation group. The preservation and conservation of our old building stock can make good economic sense as well as serving the interests of sentiment and style.

Through the application of an adaptive reuse strategy old buildings are recycled. Deciding to recycle a building depends in part on the building's condition and the economic viability of the business within it while determining structural soundness is a matter of technical judgment based on an understanding of old building materials and technologies. It is important that a structural engineer or building inspector possess this understanding and knowledge of old buildings or an inappropriate assessment may be made.

Advice and resource material on the preservation and rehabilitation of old buildings is available through the Didsbury Main Street Office at 335-3265. (This column was based on work by Fraser Shaw - Ponoka Main Street Coordinator with his permission)

810 - BIRTHDAYS

The time has come, I have been told,
To pass on greetings to the "OLD".
Sept. 11th is her day
And 40 years are here to stay.
At 6 years old she smiled her best,
And now we'll put her to the test.
Is she still the cute, sweet girl,
That thankfully lost that "TONI" curf?
Happy Birthday, Mary C.

Best game of his life

Low net. Claude Baril took the low net title at the men's closed golf tournament at the Didsbury Golf Club by playing what he called the best game of his life. The drug store owner birdied on the eighth hole and never looked back for the rest of the game.

Shawn Orr spurs to an 89 at Vancouver

Special to the Review

It was a high flying affair at the Pacific National Exhibition Pro Rodeo in Vancouver last weekend, with 14 of the rough stock competitors scoring 80 or over.

The crowd had reason to roar as Verne Franklin's Skoals Blue Ridge took Claresholm, AB's Shawn Orr to an 87-point tally in the bareback event. That was good enough to win, put $2,707 in his pocket and bump world champion Marvin Garrett of Belle Fourche, SD down to second place.

Kelly Armstrong of Seven Persons, AB, living up to his recent standards, set the precedent early in Thursday's bull riding performance with an 82-point ride on Crack Shot. Three performances and six points later, Cam Sutherland of Pollockville, AB claimed the bull riding title for $3,025, after riding Franklin's Copenhagen Baddock. Don Lawrence of Kennedy, SK marked an 86 with Steve Washington of Tulsa, OK one point behind. By Sunday night, seven places in the bull riding were all in 80s, five of which were made by Canadians. Rookie Armstrong ended up a steady sixth.

Only one Canadian rode high in the saddle bronc and that was Christopher Bews of Longview, AB. Going into Friday's performance he had an 80 score to beat, made by world leader Dan Etbauer of Goodwell, OK on a horse called Live Wire. Bews bested Etbauer with Kingsway Skoal, producing an 85-point ride that put him in the lead. While Bews' score was not surpassed, it was matched by American Bret Franks, who also made 85 points on Jay Aye for $2,577.

Saturday night's performance sent another Albertan to the winner's circle. Marty Becker of Manyberries roped his calf in a time of 7.6 seconds to win $3,026 and firmly maintain his number one spot in the Canadian standings. Texan Stran Smith and Joe Lucas of Carstairs, AB, trailed Becker by 0.3 of a second to tie for second place.

In other timed events, Americans John Hall, Butch Myers and Calgary's Les Deschamps were in the running to share the steer wrestling title with 3.9 seconds until, in the final performance, Innisfail, AB's Tom Shuckburgh came out strongly and surpassed them to win in a time of 3.5 seconds. Molly Swanson of Simms, MT was able to remain in first place in the ladies barrel racing after a 14.29 second run on Friday night but Charlotte Schmidt of Cutbank, MT and Edson, AB's Jackie Scherger were both bumped after two close runs Sunday night. American Angie Meadors ran a time of 14.5
